OFFICERS OF LEGION NAMED

ferior associations, the committee have agreed after having considered a great many names and discussed the merits of the different names, to recommend to you for adoption, the following name for the "MILITARY ORDER OF THE MEDAL OF HONOR OF THE UNITED STATES."

This name expresses, as briefly as any words we could discover that this organization is composed of those persons who have received a medal of honor from the United States on account of military service. The word "military" here is used in its broad significance, derived as it is from the Greek word meaning contest, and the Latin word "milito" to fight, and includes necessarily the navy as well as the army, the same as the word does in the order of the Loyal Legion of the United States which is composed of officers both of the army and navy who served during the war of the Rebellion.

Respectfully submitted, in behalf of the committee,
Francis S. Hesterman,
Chairman.

OLD TITLE RETAINED.

Because the suggested title did not contain the words "Military and Naval Order" it was stoutly opposed. "Congressional Medal of Honor" was suggested. It was finally voted not to change the old title "Medal of Honor Legion."

The committee appointed to consider the vice commander's suggestions recommended that Medal of Honor members should be on the army register and that the president and secretary of war and navy should be ex-officio members.

A committee was appointed, and, at Mr. Cummings' suggestion, to act with Senator Quay, to secure the reinstatement of Daniel Caldwell, a member who had been removed from the United States mint at Philadelphia, and to attend to future similar cases.

A vote of thanks it was suggested should be given to Captain J. DeLacey, a member and of the committee, for his part in providing entertainment for the Legion, but he said the thanks were due Colonel Boies, Colonel Rippe, Major Oakford and Mr. Atherton, of the committee, and the Scranton newspapers. Resolutions of thanks were adopted along the lines suggested by Captain DeLacey.

After regretting the absence of Mayor Bailey, who was to respond to the toast "The City of Scranton," Mr. Cummings said: "I feel like responding to the toast myself for I love Scranton so." Then after making a humorous comparison of the absence of Mayor Bailey and Mr. Bailey, of Texas, in the chairmanship fight in congress, he called on Captain DeLacey to respond to the toast, "The City of Scranton."

Captain DeLacey made a happy impromptu response in which he told his companions how glad and proud the city was to have such honored and represent men in its midst.

"The Daniel Dougherty of the Lackawanna Valley" was the way Toastmaster Cummings, A. J. Conborn, in introducing him to respond to "The Medal of Honor Legion." Mr. Colborn has made many good after dinner speeches in this city; in fact he has never made any but good ones, and his speech in regard to the medals by those who know his record to have been his crowning effort. Patriotic subjects are his forte and the manner in which he handled this, one of the most inspiring of patriotic themes was a revelation to the strangers and a source of additional pride to his fellow townsmen and admirers. His tribute to the gallantry of the men who had earned the medal of honor will not long be forgotten by those to whom it was directed.

THE UNION SOLDIER.

Colonel Courson next introduced Hon Amos Cummings to respond to the toast "The Union Soldier." When Mr. Cummings rose to respond everybody present rose with him, drank his health and joined in three rousing cheers for the new commander.

Mr. Cummings first dwelt eloquent over his theme, then waxed humorously for a time on this subject so successful of humor and finally drifted into a fierce denunciation of those who would deny the deserving preserver of his country of a military pension on his widow and orphans of some small recompense for the husband or father they gave to the nation's cause. Ex-President Cleveland was brought into the speech in this connection and it is needless to say that the speaker's oratory was broken by enthusiasm created by Mr. Cummings' references to him.

Hon. H. M. Edwards was to have responded to the toast "The Bar." He could not return to the speech-making, so Toastmaster Cummings compelled Dr. McLeod to respond. Although the reverend gentleman protested against making an impromptu speech where such good speeches were expected. However, he stepped forth and launched there was no occasion for him to make any excuses. It was a most timely and elegant address. Among other good things he said:

IS A MAN OF PEACE.

"I am a man of peace and an ambassador of the Prince of Peace, but I believe in holy war. If there ever was a holy war the war you fought in was a holy one, for you killed every man that kills slavery is a holy war. I am a man of peace, as I said before, but if there should ever be another such war I would at least do what an ex-president did. (The rest was lost in laughter.)"

General St. Clair A. Muholland, of Philadelphia, responded to the toast "Pennsylvania." After telling a number of good stories he said it was not necessary to tell anything about Pennsylvania but if he had time he would tell of the military glory of Pennsylvania. It was too great a subject to attempt to cover in one night or in a week of nights. He paid a glowing tribute to the men of Luzerne and Lackawanna, paying particular tribute to Oakford, Ricketts, Dana, Coningham, Sergeant Crippen and De Lacy and said that there wasn't a man in the gallant regiments from these counties who was not deserving of a medal of honor.

The next toast was by Colonel F. L. Hitchcock, "The Volunteer Soldier." He excused himself from going into any great lengths as the subject had been thoroughly covered and that the hour was late.

Major Moses Veale next dealt with "The Ladies" or rather "The Women," as he amended it, the latter term being to his mind the more tasteful and proper in referring to her to whom man owes everything which him that is good and noble. It was an eloquent and tender tribute to womankind; one of the most beautiful efforts of the evening.

"The Press," by Colonel F. J. Fitzsimmons, was the next toast, and as usual the eloquent and witty "Chauncey of the Local Press" kept his hearers continually laughing or applauding.

General Theodore S. Peck spoke interestingly of "Heroism" and Hon. T. V. Powderly closed with a happy response to the toast "The Veterans of Lackawanna County."

MR. CRITTENTON IN GREEN RIDGE

He Last Night Addressed Another Large Audience.

HIS SERMON TOPIC WAS "PEACE"

Service Was Held in the Green Ridge Presbyterian Church—Assisted by Pastors of That Section—Meetings in the Adams Avenue Armory Beginning This Evening—Tomorrow Evening's Service Especially for Young People.

Charles W. Crittenton, of Florence Crittenton mission fame, addressed in the Green Ridge Presbyterian church last night another of the large audiences which have greeted him since his arrival in Scranton. The meeting, like its predecessors, was on the evangelical order, including prayers and scripture readings, congregational singing, a solo by Frank Wallace, the gospel singer, who accompanied Mr. Crittenton, and a sermon by the latter.

All the seats in the church were occupied and a number of the audience were seated in chairs. The service began with congregational singing led by the choir and conducted by Mr. Wallace. Prayer was offered by Rev. A. F. Chaffee, of Asbury Methodist Episcopal church, and a chapter of the scriptures (Col. 3:12) was read by Rev. F. A. Dony.

Announcements of further Crittenton meetings were made by Rev. W. J. Ford, of the Green Ridge Baptist church. There is to be a Bible meeting conducted by Mr. Crittenton this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Young Men's Christian association building. The public is invited to attend. "Assurance" will be the topic.

The night meetings during the remainder of the week will be held in the armory on Adams avenue. Tomorrow night's meeting will be especially for young people. "Conservation" will be the subject of Mr. Crittenton's Saturday night address. In referring to the theme last night he said the theme was to be treated in three parts: "The Command, the Possibility and the How."

Mr. Wallace's solo last night was "Peace" and upon that word Mr. Crittenton based his address. He prefaced his remarks with a brief prayer after being introduced by Mr. Ford.

Mr. Crittenton remarked that peace was what all men were looking for. In business, in politics, in society, humanity clamored for a certain goal which they believed would bring quietude in all walks of life and that was the kind found by John Wesley and others of his kind.

They found a place which helped write their names in ineffaceable letters on tablets that would not decay for centuries but the same could not be said of business and society leaders who attain a desired end and are peaceful for only a day.

How then can peace be found? he asked. In Job xxv appears the way. "Acquaint now thyself with Him and be at peace; thereby good shall come into thee." Job lost property, children and all that man holds dear and there was visited upon him a terrible affliction of boils, yet he did not despair, but with a quiet soul sought out God, was made acquainted and found peace. In all his trials he exclaimed, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him. (Job xlii:15).

CAN BE ACCOMPLISHED.

To do this, to get acquainted, it is not necessary, Mr. Crittenton said, to go to heaven. Through Jesus, who is always present, it can be accomplished. "Obhold me according to thy word, that I may live; and let me not be ashamed of my hope." (Psalms, cxix:116).

Perfect peace has been described and quite correctly as peace multiplied until it is peace, peace, peace, and so on indefinitely. "The peace of God which passeth all understanding shall be with you and remain with you always."

In getting acquainted with God, remembrance of Him is peace, peace, peace, and so on indefinitely. "The peace of God which passeth all understanding shall be with you and remain with you always."

Following his address Mr. Crittenton invited as it is his custom the presence in the front pews of those who had not completely surrendered themselves to God and a Christian life.

Rural Magistrate—Konrad, you are charged with committing an assault on the night watchman.

Konrad—I only threw his jacket behind the stove.

Night Watchman—Yes, your worship, but I was inside the jacket; that makes all the difference.—Dorfbarrber.

A WONDERFUL CITY.

We are assembled in a city that surpasses the story of Aladdin. (That's right.) Fifty years ago my father drove me through Razorville in a carriage. There were no palatial mansions here then. The Medal of Honor Legion, the choice soldiers of the soldierly of the United States, have been invited to come here; we have been invited by the millionaires of this Chicago of the east to a banquet. In the name of the society I thank the citizens through Colonel Courson, the chairman of the banquet committee, for this warm hospitality.
